KEY STORY

Cyclone survivors held for ransom

As of 29 June, a total of US$243.7 million was committed to relief operations.<sup>1</sup> Donors pledged an additional US$66.2 million but expressed concern about the regime's restrictions and corruption. The UN and other agencies had been unable to reach 1.1 million of the 2.4 million people affected by the cyclone.<sup>2</sup> In areas where the SPDC had granted access, aid deliveries were limited and inconsistent, and only 729,000 had received a food ration.<sup>3</sup>

- As of 29 June, SPDC authorities granted more than 290 visas to UN international staff for the response to cyclone Nargis and 225 international UN staff had been granted limited access to affected areas.<sup>4</sup> However, the SPDC had not extended clearance to foreign specialists working for other NGOs.<sup>5</sup>

- On 10 June, the SPDC's Ministry of National Planning and Economic Development announced an extra layer of restrictions on the approval process for the work and travel of humanitarian agents.<sup>6</sup> The SPDC accused foreign aid agencies and the UN of having "deviated from the normal procedures."<sup>7</sup> However, by 20 June the SPDC backtracked and agreed to revert to previous procedures.<sup>8</sup>
- By early June, Chinese and Thai medics treated 8,000 people in Rangoon and the Irrawaddy delta.<sup>9</sup> However, by mid-June, the SPDC closed down many of the camps and cancelled Thailand's third medical team mission.<sup>10</sup> Visas for medical teams from India, Japan, and the Philippines expired, and the medics left.<sup>11</sup>
- Telecoms Sans Frontieres (TSF) left Burma after SPDC authorities blocked attempts to reach affected areas. TSF believed SPDC authorities did not want affected areas supplied with telecommunications equipment.<sup>12</sup>
- As of 18 June, the US made 176 airlifts to Rangoon but then ended its Joint Task Force Caring Response.<sup>13</sup> On 4 June, the group of US ships carrying tons of aid supplies and logistics equipment departed after failing to convince the junta to allow access to cyclone survivors.<sup>14</sup>
- The SPDC's refusal to allow the WFP to use military helicopters to assist in access in isolated areas forced the WFP to charter helicopters, with each helicopter costing US$2,000 per hour to keep in the air.<sup>15</sup>

Local SPDC officials and SPDC Army soldiers have prevented aid from reaching survivors and attempted to profit personally from donor generosity.

- Reports of SPDC officials stealing aid or charging survivors for relief supplies, including rice and diesel, continued.<sup>16</sup> One survivor reported that SPDC soldiers held a lottery in his village to determine who would receive aid packages of one egg, six cans of milk, and one potato.<sup>17</sup> On 17 May, in two separate instances the SPDC arrested five SPDC Army soldiers and four SPDC officials in Buthidaung Township, Arakan State, and Rangoon's Sanchaung Township respectively for reselling donated items.<sup>18</sup>
- SPDC authorities continued to extort money and confiscate rice, paddy seeds, and cattle from farmers throughout the country, allegedly to help cyclone-affected communities.<sup>19</sup>

Relief workers arrested

Despite the SPDC's pledge to allow free access for private donors to cyclone-hit areas,<sup>20</sup> in June the SPDC arrested 17 activists for taking aid to affected communities.

- 4 June: SPDC police in Rangoon arrested comedian Zarganar during a night raid on his home. He had just returned from the Irrawaddy delta, where he distributed food, blankets, mosquito nets, and other relief items to cyclone survivors.<sup>21</sup>
- 12 June: Special Branch police in Rangoon detained 88 Generation Students Myat Thu, Yin Yin Wai, and Tin Tin Cho. The three had distributed medicine, rice, and clothes to cyclone survivors in the Irrawaddy delta.<sup>22</sup>
- 12 June: Special Branch police arrested five activists, Sizar, Ko Zaw, Tin Maung Oo, Ni Moe Hlaing, and Toe Kyaw Hlaing for helping cyclone survivors in Bogale and Labutta Townships, Irrawaddy Division.<sup>23</sup>
- 13 June: SPDC authorities in Minbu Township, Magwe Division, arrested Zaw Thet Htwe, the former editor of First Eleven weekly sports journal.<sup>24</sup> Zaw Thet Htwe had organized five trips to deliver aid to victims of cyclone Nargis in the Irrawaddy delta.<sup>25</sup>
- 14 June: SPDC authorities in Pyapon Township, Irrawaddy Division, arrested seven volunteer workers, including the Myanmar Tribune journal chief editor Aung Kyaw San and All Burma Federation of Students' Unions members Lin Htet Naing and Hnin Pwint Wei. The group had been to the Irrawaddy delta to help bury those killed by the cyclone.<sup>26</sup>

ASEAN assesses needs

Over a month after the cyclone, ASEAN announced it would begin its Post-Nargis Joint Assessment (PONJA) work. Between 9 and 20 June, its team moved around the cyclone-affected areas “assessing humanitarian needs.”<sup>27</sup> Some 350 people, including officials and volunteers from the SPDC, ASEAN, UN, World Bank, Asian Development Bank, and local and international NGOs completed data collection in 30 Townships.<sup>28</sup> The team found that 46% of families in the Irrawaddy delta have less than two days food supply and 60% inadequate access to clean water.<sup>29</sup> ASEAN’s assessment will form the basis of a revised humanitarian aid appeal to be presented in July.<sup>30</sup>

Conditions for survivors

Health: Cyclone survivors are suffering acute respiratory infections, diarrhea and shock.<sup>31</sup> Despite clean-up efforts and massive donations of equipment, clean water remains in short supply.<sup>32</sup> Local medics report that the biggest medical burden remains diarrhea.<sup>33</sup> The SPDC’s forced eviction of survivors from camps cut them off from medical assistance and shelter, increasing the threat of respiratory infection.<sup>34</sup> Ninety percent of the people in Aye Yar, Bogale Township, are reportedly suffering from dysentery.<sup>35</sup> As of 10 June, the UN recorded 781 cases of dengue fever in Rangoon, and 481 in the delta.<sup>36</sup>

Food shortages: The WFP’s appeal has only been 45% met, providing funding for only one month’s ration of rice for 750,000 people.<sup>37</sup> A mid-June USAID assessment of the Irrawaddy delta reported that food assistance would be needed until November.<sup>38</sup> Local volunteers warned that cyclone survivors who had been surviving on rotten rice and coconut shoots would run out of food in a month because private donations were drying up.<sup>39</sup> On 11 June, SPDC Minister for National Planning and Economic Development Soe Tha denied food shortages.<sup>40</sup>

Bodies in the water: Survivors continue to report bodies floating in waterways.<sup>41</sup> On 24 June, the SPDC updated the official toll of cyclone Nargis to 84,537 dead and 53,836 missing.<sup>42</sup> Decomposed bodies could not be identified, which made the process of grieving and accounting for missing persons even more difficult.<sup>43</sup>

Return to farming: The UN warned that farmers had until the end of June to replant their seedlings for the 2008 rice crop.<sup>44</sup> They estimated 700,000 hectares of paddy would need rehabilitation and 200,000 hectares were seriously damaged and would not be able to be used in the coming season.<sup>45</sup> Farmers still faced basic problems including a lack of shelter for themselves, rice seeds, fertilizers, and plowing animals.<sup>46</sup> Even if the farmers manage to pay SPDC-imposed “fees” and negotiate red tape to procure donated seeds and tilling machines, most will not be able to afford fuel to run them. The UN appealed for one million gallons of emergency diesel supplies to fuel the machines brought in to replace water buffalos killed by the cyclone.<sup>47</sup> In stark contrast, SPDC-controlled media continued to report successes in “reconstruction efforts” and displayed images of farmers plowing monsoon paddy and gratefully receiving paddy seeds.<sup>48</sup>

Schools reopen: On 2 June, the SPDC reopened most schools. Schools opened in monsoon rains, some without sanitation, while others had damaged roofs or walls with holes for windows.<sup>49</sup> On 17 June, two children were hospitalized and others injured when part of a building collapsed in a middle school in Tharkayta Township.<sup>50</sup> Many parents could not afford to send their children to class or were forced to take out loans to pay unofficial fees.<sup>51</sup> Other children will have to work to support their families or pay for the education of younger siblings.<sup>52</sup>

Survivor evictions: By mid June, the SPDC had closed down all survivor camps, except in Labutta Township, where about 10,000 survivors remained.<sup>53</sup> The SPDC forced survivors out with varying degrees of coercion. In some instances, the SPDC ordered them onto trucks supplied by private companies with ties to the regime, including Ayer Shwe Wah, Max Myanmar, War War Win, and Zay Kabar.<sup>54</sup> The ICRC estimated that at least 1.5 million people remain homeless in the delta.<sup>55</sup> Most people began rebuilding on their own, but had to pay the SPDC to receive donated construction material.<sup>56</sup>

Daw Suu's 63rd birthday marked

On 19 June, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi turned 63.

- Daw Aung San Suu Kyi presented an offering of 64 yellow roses at Rangoon's Shwedagon pagoda through NLD member Myint Soe.<sup>57</sup> The number signifies the beginning of Daw Suu's 64th year.
- About 700 NLD members and supporters gathered at the party headquarters and released 63 doves.<sup>58</sup> More than 100 USDA members and Swan Arr Shin thugs disrupted the event and assaulted and beat several participants. The junta-backed thugs arrested 14 NLD members including one Buddhist monk.<sup>59</sup>
- About 100 NLD members and supporters celebrated Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's birthday in Taunggoat Township, Arakan State.<sup>60</sup>
- Numerous ceremonies to mark Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's birthday were held abroad.<sup>61</sup>

The May extension of Daw Suu's house arrest met with more international condemnation and renewed calls for her release.

- 4 June: The Philippines criticized the SPDC's decision to extend the house arrest of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi.<sup>62</sup>
- 19 June: The EU Parliament passed a resolution that condemned the SPDC's decision to extend the house arrest of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and demanded her release.<sup>63</sup>
- 19 June: The EU Council said that it deeply regretted the decision of the SPDC to renew Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's house arrest.<sup>64</sup>
- 19 June: US Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice appealed for Daw Aung Suu Kyi's release.<sup>65</sup>
- 19 June: British PM Gordon Brown and French President Nicolas Sarkozy demand that the SPDC release Daw Aung San Suu Kyi.<sup>66</sup>
- 20 June: EU leaders appealed to the SPDC to release Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and other political prisoners.<sup>67</sup>
- 27 June: Foreign Ministers of the G8 called on the SPDC to free Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and other political prisoners.<sup>68</sup>

Military offensive in Karen State

Despite the start of the rainy season, the regime continued its military offensive in Eastern Burma. On 4 June, SPDC Army troops from Infantry Battalion 240 attacked Te Mu Der village in Papun District,

Karen State. Soldiers burned rice stores, destroyed homes, farms, and damaged a church. Over 1,000 people from Te Mu Der and the nearby villages fled to the jungle.<sup>69</sup>

On 5 June, Amnesty International declared the regime’s ongoing campaign of terror in Eastern Burma constituted a crime against humanity in their report: “Crimes against humanity in eastern Myanmar.”<sup>70</sup>

Reshuffles: The regime is here to stay?

On 20-21 June, the regime carried out a massive shake-up that involved about 200 military officers, two ministers, five senior SPDC officials, seven Army Regional Commanders, and the Navy’s Commander-in-Chief.<sup>71</sup>

Position	Incoming	Outgoing
SPDC Cabinet

West	Brig Gen Thaug Aye	Brig Gen Maung Shein

The Navy’s Commander-in-Chief Lt Gen Soe Thein was relieved of his post reportedly because of his slow response to the cyclone emergency.<sup>73</sup>

The reshuffle is part of SPDC Chairman Sr Gen Than Shwe’s strategy to replace high-ranking officials with young officers to ensure military presence in future administrations.<sup>74</sup> The reshuffle also marks another chapter in the power struggle between the Sr Gen Than Shwe and Vice Sr Gen Maung Aye. Most of the officers who were given control of strategic commands are Than Shwe loyalists.<sup>75</sup>

Opium poppy cultivation increases in Burma

On 26 June, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) said that the alarming increase in opium production in Afghanistan and Burma in 2007 was posing a serious threat to the progress made in drug control over the past several years. ## HUMAN RIGHTS

Ojea: No improvement in Burma

On 6 June, the UN Special Rapporteur on human rights in Burma Tomás Ojea Quintana presented his first report to the Human Rights Council.<sup>77</sup> The report stated that:

- The human rights situation in Burma had not improved since the previous report and critical issues still had to be addressed.
- The SPDC's constitutional referendum process lacked transparency, free debate, and dissemination of information among the public.
- An unknown number of individuals were still missing since the crackdown on the August-September 2007 anti-junta protests.
- The number of political prisoners stood at 1,900.

Human Rights Council condemns SPDC

On 18 June, the UN Human Rights Council adopted a resolution that condemned the SPDC's "ongoing systematic violations of human rights."<sup>78</sup> It was the 18th resolution passed by the Geneva-based body against the military regime since 1992. The resolution:

- Expressed concern that the regime did not heed previous council resolutions as well as UN Security Council Presidential Statements.
- Deplored that the constitutional referendum was held in an atmosphere of intimidation and in disregard for international standards of free and fair elections.
- Called on the junta to engage in a real process of dialogue and national reconciliation.
- Called on the SPDC to honor its promise to allow relief workers "immediate, full and unhindered access" to cyclone-affected communities.
- Called on the regime to stop sending cyclone survivors back to areas where they would not have access to emergency relief.
- Condemned the SPDC's ongoing recruitment of child soldiers.

UNSC Resolution 1820

On 19 June, the UN Security Council adopted resolution 1820 condemning the use of sexual violence in conflict "as a tactic of war to humiliate, dominate, instill fear in, disperse and/or forcibly relocate civilian members of a community or ethnic group".<sup>79</sup> The Women's League of Burma (WLB) welcomed the resolution and called on the Security Council to refer Sr Gen Than Shwe to the International Criminal Court under the new resolution.<sup>80</sup> The WLB drew attention to the SPDC's ongoing campaign of sexual violence against women in Burma, and the system of impunity which allows sexual violence to go unpunished.

In June, there were again reports of SPDC troops raping women and girls in Burma.

- 8 June: An SPDC Army Major raped two girls, aged 13 and 14, in Thangtlang, Chin State.<sup>81</sup>

Forced labor remains widespread

The SPDC's drive to repair the damage caused by cyclone Nargis, armed ethnic resistance in Mon State, and the junta's obsession with growing castor oil plants caused increased instances of forced labor.

- 3 June: SPDC authorities used 128 prisoners in Ann Township, Arakan State, to perform forced labor involving physic nut cultivation.<sup>83</sup>
- 14 June: After several clashes with Monland Restoration Party forces, the SPDC Army began construction of seven new bases in Ye Township, Southern Mon State, and ordered local villagers to perform forced labor to build the bases.<sup>84</sup>
- 20 June: SPDC authorities required hundreds of villagers in Myitkyina Township, Kachin State, to perform forced labor to plant castor oil trees.<sup>85</sup>
- Since 20 June: SPDC authorities have required 150 villagers to perform forced labor on the Rangoon-Akyab Highway at a construction site in Kyauktaw Township, Arakan State.<sup>86</sup>
- Late June: The SPDC forcibly recruited unemployed workers from Mandalay and Rangoon to work as day laborers on SPDC-seized farmlands in the cyclone ravaged Irrawaddy delta.<sup>87</sup>

On 13 June, the SPDC's pervasive practice of using forced labor was, once again, discussed by the International Labor Organization (ILO). The ILO Committee on the Application of Standards convened a Special Sitting on Burma.<sup>88</sup> The Committee expressed its profound concern that forced labor in Burma, including the recruitment of children into the armed forces, remained as widespread as before.<sup>89</sup>

Arrests and releases

- 9 June: SPDC authorities released 15 NLD members who had been arrested on 27 May for demonstrating for the release of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi.<sup>90</sup> [See May 2008 Burma Bulletin]
- 10 June: SPDC authorities arrested at least 16 survivors of cyclone Nargis as they gathered outside the UNDP headquarters in Rangoon to complain about not receiving any help from the regime.<sup>91</sup>
- 25 June: Police arrested a woman calling for the release of political prisoners near Rangoon's City Hall.<sup>92</sup>

Detention conditions

- Dysentery, typhoid, and other diseases reportedly spread throughout Rangoon's Insein prison after authorities gave rotten food to inmates. Food stocks had been left rotting after cyclone Nargis blew off the roof of the prison's food warehouse.<sup>93</sup>
- Following the 3 May shooting that resulted in the death of 36 inmates, Insein prison authorities prevented inmates from freely communicating with visitors.<sup>94</sup> [See May 2008 Burma Bulletin] On 6 June, the UN Special Rapporteur on human rights in Burma Tomás Ojea Quintana urged the

- Authorities in Insein prison denied NLD member Thant Zin Myo and 88 Generation Student Myo Yan Naung Thein medical treatment despite their deteriorating health.<sup>97</sup>
- In mid-June, a man the SPDC accused of being involved in the theft of Buddha statues in Magwe Division died during an interrogation session at Magwe police station.<sup>98</sup>

Freedom of information

The regime tightened its grip on the flow of information to hide the suffering of cyclone-affected communities and its mishandling of relief assistance.

- Police detained a resident of Labutta who had filmed the devastation caused by cyclone Nargis.<sup>99</sup>
- SPDC authorities in Arakan State banned the sale and distribution of privately-made VCDs of cyclone Nargis.<sup>100</sup>
- SPDC authorities in Kungyungone Township, Rangoon Division, seized cameras and video cameras from photo shops.<sup>101</sup>
- On 10 June, SPDC authorities in Rangoon’s Tamwe Township arrested Ein Khine Oo, a 24-year-old journalist of the weekly journal Ecovision. She had been covering stories related to aid delivery to cyclone survivors in the Irrawaddy delta. The police accused her of taking photographs with the intention of selling them to foreign media organizations.<sup>102</sup>
- In early June, SPDC authorities in Rangoon seized satellite dishes during raids on some shops.<sup>103</sup> They also arrested two satellite dish dealers.<sup>104</sup>
- On 22 June, SPDC authorities deported Korean journalist Lee Yu Kyong for visiting the NLD Headquarters in Rangoon.<sup>105</sup>

DISPLACEMENT

Survivor arrivals in Thailand

Over 100 cyclone survivors have arrived in Mae Sot, Thailand, from the Irrawaddy delta.<sup>106</sup>

The SPDC attempted to stem the flow, warning Buddhist monasteries in Myawaddy to refuse shelter to any cyclone survivors. Military checkpoints have reportedly been strengthened.<sup>107</sup> On 2 June, the SPDC Navy arrested 65 people, including 15 children and 20 women from Bogale Township, near Zardatgyi Island west of Kawthaung, Tenasserim Division. They were attempting to reach refugee camps in Thailand.<sup>108</sup>

ECONOMY

Business as usual

The SPDC applied for membership in the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC) economic grouping, which is led by India. The application is likely to be considered in July at the group's next summit meeting in Sri Lanka in July.<sup>110</sup>

- 5 June: India approved a 10-year Bilateral Investment Promotion and Protection Agreement with the SPDC.<sup>111</sup>
- 20 June: The SPDC, China National Petroleum Corporation (CNPC), Daewoo, ONGC Videsh Ltd, and Gas Authority of India Ltd (GAIL) signed a memorandum of understanding for the sale and transport of natural gas from offshore blocks A-1 and A-3 to China.<sup>112</sup> Daewoo said it expected to profit more than US$10 billion from the project over 25 years.<sup>113</sup>
- 22 June: An Indian commerce ministry delegation began a visit to Burma, hoping to progress in the construction of its Kaladan trade corridor. The delegation signed four economic cooperation agreements in Naypyidaw, including US$82 million in credit for reconstruction efforts.<sup>114</sup>
- 23 June: Thailand's PTT Exploration & Production signed an agreement with the SPDC to develop offshore gas Block M-9. The company is expected to supply 300 million cubic feet of gas per day, of which 80% would be delivered to Thailand.<sup>115</sup>
- 24 June: The SPDC launched an 11-day gem, jade, and pearl auction in Rangoon. Each auction brings in an estimated US$100 million in revenue for the regime.<sup>116</sup>

Hunger spreads

In areas not directly in the path of the cyclone, food shortages have spread.

- The SPDC placed restrictions on trade in rice with China, and the movement of rice between townships in Kachin and Shan States. Traders had their rice supplies confiscated at checkpoints.<sup>117</sup> Traders questioned how they would survive, since they are usually dependent on rice imports from the cyclone-hit delta.<sup>118</sup>
- Plagues of rats in Chin State destroyed the rice crop. The SPDC prevented humanitarian assistance from reaching these areas.<sup>119</sup>
